

Filing a Complaint and Suing for Revocation

1. If you are dissatisfied with this action, you may file an application for examination with the Yamaguchi Prefectural National Health Insurance Examination Board within three months from the day after the day on which you were informed of this action.
2. You cannot file a lawsuit for revocation of this action until a determination is made on your application for examination as stipulated in paragraph 1 above. You may file a lawsuit against Shimonoseki City for revocation of this action within six months from the day after the day on which you were informed of the determination (In the lawsuit, Shimonoseki City will be represented by the Mayor of Shimonoseki City.). However, if any of the following conditions are met, you may file a lawsuit before a determination on your application is made.
 - (a) When no determination is made within three months from the day after the day on which you apply for examination
 - (b) When there is an urgent need to avoid significant damage that would be caused by the decision on or execution of the action or the continuation of the procedure
 - (c) When there is any other legitimate reason for filing a lawsuit before a determination is made
- 3 However, if, prior to any of the above periods, one year has passed from the day after the day on which the action is taken, you will no longer be able to apply for examination. Also, if one year has passed from the day after the day on which a determination on your application for examination is made, you will no longer be able to file a lawsuit for revocation of that action. If there is a legitimate reason, you may be permitted to apply for examination or file a lawsuit for revocation of an action even after any of the periods specified above has passed or after one year has passed from the day after the day on which the action is taken (or a determination on your application for examination is made).
